Call for papers

- First call for papers sent on September 24, 2021
 - Including information about important dates, registration fees, and abstract submission
- Second call for papers sent on January 28, 2022
 - Including information about invited speakers and special sessions such as the EURO Forum Roundtable
- Third call for papers sent on March 4, 2022
- The role of Gerhard-Wilhelm Weber was crucial to spread out the word about EURO2022

In addition to this, there was a direct communication with EURO Working Groups, EURO Forums, national Operational Research societies, and EURO2022 Stream Organizers to spread out the word about the conference, its areas, its invited streams, its sessions, and its special events.

- Each area had one, two or three members of the Programme Committee as coordinators
- The area coordinators were in continuous communication with their stream organizers, as well with the coordinators of neighboring areas to design a wonderful programme

The abstract submissions

- The abstract submission system was planned to be open
From: Friday, October 29, 2022
Until: Friday, March 4, 2022
- The deadline was extended to: Friday, March 25, 2022. This extension was thought to be helpful for colleagues who were impacted by the invasion of Ukraine, as well as for colleagues from countries in which there were still COVID-19 restrictions, affecting their work-related travel

The abstract submissions

- The length of the abstracts was maintained at 1500 characters
- The area coordinators worked closely with the stream and session organizers to inform the speakers timely about the status of their submissions. This was particularly important given the longer extension that was given to authors to submit their abstract
- The help guidelines for the relevant roles in the construction and delivery of the scientific programme (area coordinators, stream organizers, session organizers, session chairs, speakers) were enhanced

The abstract submissions

- In total, 1946 abstracts submitted, and only a very small number was rejected, namely, 20
- Some of these abstracts were withdrawn by the authors, and others had to be removed because the authors did not register for the conference
- A good number of the cancellations were due to COVID-19, as well as travelling disruptions faced before the conference and as well as during the conference
- The conference counted with 1490 presentations across 449 sessions and 67 streams

The Plenary and the Keynote Speakers

The plenary and the keynote talks were one of the highlights of the conference. The invited speakers touched on some of the latest advances in continuous, discrete, bilevel and robust optimization and their relevance to tackling grand challenges such as catastrophe risk management, COVID-19, explainability in algorithmic decision making, fairness in resource allocation, humanitarian decision making and collaboration, and the transformation of our energy, industrial, and mobility systems
